Time Bandits (Imposed by Others) 1/2

- Explaining a task you've already shown someone how to do again/asking you for information they can get elsewhere
  - Chatting/asking questions when you're busy
  - Distractions (e-mails, telephones, background noise, unwanted visitors)
  - Travelling to meetings, traffic jams, late trains/buses
  - Unscheduled meetings
  - Changes of subject during meetings/not sticking to the agenda

Time Bandits (Imposed by Others) 2/2

- Duplication of work, repeated drafting or correcting others' mistakes
  - Delegation of work to you
  - Changing or conflicting deadlines and short deadlines imposed by others
  - Irrelevant reading or paperwork
  - Poor communication
  - Unclear job descriptions
  - Excessive workload
  - Under-resourcing

Time Bandits (Imposed by Yourself) 1/2

- Procrastination
  - Poor planning/not prioritising
  - Concentrating on the tasks we most like to do and neglecting the others
  - Putting off difficult or boring tasks
  - Doing the task we were most recently asked to do, not the most important
  - Lack of self-discipline
  - Insufficient knowledge/training and not asking for help

Time Bandits (Imposed by Yourself) 2/2

- Agreeing to everything/not saying 'no' and overcommitting
  - Short attention span
  - Inability to delegate to others
  - Correcting your own mistakes or duplicating work
  - Mislaying essential documents
  - Tiredness
  - Chatting
  - Not finding out what your superior's priorities and deadlines are

Dealing with the Enemy Without (1/2)

- Handling interruptions: Be assertive, but polite; stand up and keep eye contact, give yourself some control; ask direct or controlled questions; practice saying 'no'; set a time to discuss it later
  - Preventing interruptions: Closed door policy; scheduled visiting hours; gate keepers; signs not to disturb you; scheduled 'downtime'
  - Incoming calls: Use voicemail; ask if you can call back; ask someone to take calls for you; control the length of the call; move the phone out of your line of sight

Dealing with the Enemy Without (2/2)

- Meetings: Have an agenda with timeslots; use a good person to chair and someone else to minute; schedule them at awkward times, so people want to finish on time; don't let people waffle (consider having the AOB at the beginning, not end); use an egg timer; look into video-conferencing instead of travelling; confirm whether you need to be at a meeting and excuse yourself if not
  - E-mails: Use a spam filter; turn off the incoming mail notification and only look at them when you want to; divulge your e-mail address selectively; write 'one screen' e-mails and add attachments; put contact times in your automatic signature; forward e-mails that are not your job
  - Accept red tape where it exists and plan around it

Dealing with the Enemy Within (1/2)

- Take a proper lunch break and go outside, if you can
  - Get up from your desk for a few minutes every hour
  - Set yourself goals or deadlines and reward yourself when you achieve them
  - Delegate jobs that can be done by other people just as well as you can
  - Write 'to do' lists and identify your top ten
  - Carry a notebook and pen to capture good ideas
  - Get the unpleasant jobs out of the way first

Dealing with the Enemy Within (2/2)

- Organise your desk, so that everything you need is within arm's reach
  - Eat and sleep properly, keep fit and learn some relaxation techniques
  - Get clear definitions of tasks and objectives, and finish your work
  - Don't be a perfectionist
  - Don't take on too much work
  - Plan your time for each task
  - Get training and seek help when you need it

Scheduling Tasks

A black and white photograph of Albert Einstein, showing his characteristic wild hair and mustache. He is looking slightly to the right of the camera with a thoughtful expression. His hands are clasped together in front of him. The quote is overlaid in large, white, bold, sans-serif capital letters.

“THE ONLY REASON FOR TIME IS SO THAT EVERYTHING DOESN’T HAPPEN AT ONCE.”

ALBERT EINSTEIN

‘A short guide to managing your time’

- www.ox.ac.uk/students/academic/guidance/skills/time

Prioritising Tasks: The Four Ds

- 1) If a task is important and urgent, do it now! Get it over with first, don't procrastinate - just get it done. Break it into little steps, if needs be, perhaps reward yourself when you're done.
- 2) If a task is important, but not urgent, plan when to do it ('diarise' it). Definitely break it into little steps, if you can, and schedule a bit in regularly, so that it doesn't become a huge, indigestible job when the deadline looms (when it becomes important and urgent) – an 'elephant task'.
- 3) If a task is not important, but is urgent, plan when the most appropriate time is to deal with it or delegate it, if you can, but not necessarily permanently. If you do delegate it, make sure you communicate it clearly, so that the other person is prepared for it.
- 4) If a task is not important and not urgent, consider whether it has to be done at all and dump it, if appropriate. If it should be done and you would find it interesting to do, consider diarising it for another time, otherwise, delegate it permanently to someone else, if you can.
